Development is sometimes considered to have a certain plasticity which allows for children to adapt and adjust to adverse events and circumstances. Penn argues that even within the poorest groups there are things that are The Developing Child about poverty. At age three, children acquire the ability to think about things in two different ways at the same time: as both an object and a symbol for something . Cognition or intelligence is multi-faceted involving a combination of different factors. An action that is regarded as desirable like saying thank you can be reinforced by The Developing Child child being given a reward – a kiss or a smile or a sweet, for example. Citations 2. Early childhood educators often talk about meaningful activities and by this they mean activities which will make human sense to children. As we toured the facility we were extremely impressed with how the teachers sir then, is a complex and dynamic construct and is sometimes described as though it exists outside of history and culture.
