More significantly, perhaps, a funeral procession consisting of mourners marched from the West End to Bow Cemetery when Mr Linnell was subsequently laid to rest. As an alternative to the scenario postulated by police, therefore, consideration might be given to the possibility that he falsely implicated Pizer in order to sell his story to the highest bidding newspaper and thereby secure his passage to the Antipodes. We are not really more sophisticated or hard-hearted than the Victorians; Early Victorian newspapers differed markedly from the small-circulation and gossipy journals of the mid-eighteenth century, but the changes in format, content, and circulation that took place between the s and s were almost as pronounced. So remote from the standard fare of murder, these atrocities denied the press and the public the spectacle of a trial and the satisfaction of a conviction followed by a hanging. I really wanted to like it. Making matters worse is the artwork of Eddie Campbell, which can kindly be called fire was one of .
